

Hi Al, if you go to this site directly:

<http://www.sierraclub.ca/national/programs/biodiversity/forests/nfs/database/aboriginal.html> and hit on the Saskatchewan column under # of aboriginal tenures (for example)- you will see Mistik listed as a "best practice". I think there is another reference under the aboriginal heading as well. Feel free to look around.

The Sierra Club of Canada has released a best forestry practices layer to the National Forest Strategy Report Card. The best practices layer highlights progressive forest management practices across Canada. For the ecosystem-based management theme, the majority of practices selected are at the industrial scale, but some small operations with innovative practices are highlighted as well. Practices were selected to showcase a diversity of players from a diversity of geographical locations. You can view the best practices at : www.sierraforestwatch.ca
